and Female Negroes. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

Nonfole, December 1, 1890. Up to December 1st, which ends the first three months of the season, the cotton movement of Norfolk has amounted to 298,047 bales. The receipts have fallen off considerably during the last month, and now hardly average 4,000 bales a day. The factors say they are surprised that even that much comes, as no farmer who can afford to hold will think of sending his crop to market at prevailing prices. The exports since the 1st of September have amounted to 142,667 bales, about 11,000 bales more than the same period last year.

We carry one of the BEST ASSOCIATED STOCKS to be found, and our prices are always as low as you can find when you compare qualities.

We are a little different from the other dry goods houses, inasmuch as we do not carry the usual Christmas toys and brie-a-brae you can get in the other places, but devote our time and attention exclusively to DRY GOODS, WRAPS, CARPETS, and such other goods as you can find in a first-class dry goods house,

We are actually doing the Wrap trade of this city, and you can form no idea of the magnitude of our business in this line until you see the enormous stock we display, it being three times as large as any other firm carries. We have all of the nobblest styles in PLUSH JACKETS and COATS, ASTRAhave all of the nobbiest styles in FLUSH JACKETS and COATS, ASTRA-CHAN, trimmed and plain, CLOTH JACKETS in Diagonals, Cheviots, Beavers, and Rough effects, trimmed and plain. The prices we ask for them are the most reasonable you could possibly wish for, always meeting your purse and the styles your ideas.

Just received and displayed this week a large lot of CAPES in Astrachan, Seal, Plush, and Coney Pur. They are the most desirable goods to be found. They are marked at vivers to independ the control of the process of the control of the c in the city, and are greatly in demand. They are marked at prices to induce you to buy them.

The stock of MISSES and CHILDREN'S WRAPS we show you cannot be matched elsewhere, and they are offered to you way below their value Don't miss this opportunity.
